Conserving water at home: Not just a drop in the bucket

With water conservation on everyone's minds lately it is no surprise that people are looking for ways to help save the environment and also save money on their utility bills.

Some companies are taking notice of the demand for water saving fixtures and are creating new products with conservation in mind. Price Pfister is a leading provider of water conserving faucets and was one of the first faucet companies to partner with the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) WaterSense program.

For those looking for ways that they can help be more environmentally conscious, Price Pfister (www.pricepfister.com) has provided some tips on how to conserve water in the home by just making a few changes:

- Installing water efficient faucets can save 2,500 gallons per month.
- Installing water efficient showerheads can save 500-800 gallons per month.
- Fixing leaky faucets or plumbing joints can save 20 gallons per day for every leak stopped.
- Turning off water while brushing your teeth can save 3 gallons each day.
- Shortening showers can save 700 gallons per month for every minute

Price Pfister's WaterSense certified products help reduce water consumption by approximately 30 percent without compromising your water experience. Some of these products include: The classic Amherst product line, the traditional water-pump inspired Ashfield models, the contemporary Vega, as well as many more traditional and more modern designed product lines.

By switching to water efficient plumbing fixtures from Price Pfister, the average household can save $170 every year on it's water bill.
